Course Description:

Foundations of Social Work Practice I is the first course in the Foundation sequence of three required practice courses. The course is designed to prepare students to apply a generalist perspective to social work practice with individuals. The course includes the history, mission, and identity of the profession. The commitment of the profession of social work to practice with culturally diverse, vulnerable, and high-risk populations and to promote economic and social justice is included. Social work values and ethics are emphasized and knowledge and skill in resolving value and ethical dilemmas are included. The course provides an introduction to direct social work practice with an emphasis on work with individual clients based on an ecological/systemic theoretical perspective. The problem-solving process including problem definition, assessment, goal planning, intervention, termination, and outcome evaluation is examined. The task centered approach and crisis interventions are included as examples of the problem-solving process in direct social work practice. The strengths perspective is emphasized in the content on assessment and problem solving processes. Mutuality in relationship building, communications skills, such as empathic and active listening, and the professional use of self are also included.

Course Rationale:

The problem-solving process through planned change forms the knowledge and practice base for professional functioning. This course serves a socialization function by assisting students in their integration of social work practice knowledge, values, ethics, and skills. This is one of three foundation courses that prepare students to apply a generalist perspective to social work practice and provide the basis for the advanced concentration courses.

Course Objectives:

By the completion of this course the student is expected to be able to demonstrate, through course activities, assignments, and/or exams:

1. An ability to describe the essential characteristics of social work professional practice that reflects both knowledge and a personal perspective regarding the nature of the profession, e.g., its purpose, functions, roles, and historical development;
2. An awareness of the relationship between one's own beliefs and social work values and ethics;
3. An understanding of the implications of social work values and ethics for social work practice;
4. Skill in defining social work roles of direct service provider, broker, care coordinator, mediator, advocate;
5. Knowledge about building professional helping relationships based on mutuality and a strengths perspective;
6. An understanding of the practitioner's conscious use of self in the process of developing relationships with clients including recognition of facilitating factors and potential areas of conflict;
7. Recognition of the impact of agency policy on social work practice with clients;
8. An ability to apply a generalist perspective to the problem-solving process in direct practice, identifying various system levels significant to both assessment and intervention;
9. An ability to examine the effects that the variables of age, race, ethnicity, social and economic class, culture, religion, and sexual orientation play in service delivery and formulate ethically sound interventive strategies accordingly;
10. An ability to formulate an intervention plan emphasizing the use of task-centered and crisis intervention approaches with individual clients;
11. Skill in formulating a plan for evaluation of their practice with individual clients.

Course Texts:

Required Text:

Recommended Texts:

Loewenberg, F.M., Dolgoff, R., & Harrington, D. (2000). Ethical decisions for social work practice (6th ed.). Itasca, IL: F.E. Peacock.

Tolson, E.R., Reid, W.J., & Garvin, C.D. (1994). Generalist practice: A task-centered approach. New York: Columbia University Press.

Course Requirements:

Cultural Competency Presentations (25% of final grade) – Early in the course, students will form small groups that will work towards developing a cultural competency presentation. Each group will select a diverse client population based on ethnicity, social and economic class, culture, religion, sexual orientation, or disability, and conduct a presentation focused on various issues in direct practice with the identified population. The presentation should demonstrate the group members' comprehension of the following:

1. Knowledge of social problems that differentially impact the identified population;
2. Knowledge of issues associated with building helping relationships with and engaging clients of the identified population;
3. Knowledge of issues associated with conducting a comprehensive psychosocial assessment of clients of the identified population;
4. Knowledge of issues associated with formulating and implementing intervention plans with the identified population;
5. Knowledge of issues associated with formulating and implementing a plan for evaluation of practice intervention plan.

In addition, group members will individually turn in to the instructor a one-page reaction paper summarizing their experience with the assignment. This paper is intended as an introspective exercise through which the student is expected to explore any prejudices, stereotypes, or assumptions held regarding the identified population that either you were not aware of, or that may have changed as a result of the assignment.

Examination I (25% of final grade) – An in-class examination will be held on October 16, 2001. The format of the examination will be discussed no later than the week prior to the exam.

Examination II (25% of final grade) - An in-class examination will be held on November 25, 2001. The format of the examination will be discussed no later than the week prior to the exam.

Case Summary Paper (25% of final grade) – Students are expected to write a case summary paper of a real or hypothetical client. If a real client is used, the student must seek permission from their field instructor to use client information. An outline of the paper is included elsewhere in the syllabus. The case summary paper is due on the final day of class.

The grading scale is as follows:

A	93-100
B+	88-92.9
B	80-87.9
C+	77-79.9
C	70-76.9
D	60-69.9
F	< 60

Course Policies:

Students are expected to attend classes regularly, arrive on time, and remain in class until the class period concludes. Any student missing more than three classes may receive a failing grade.

Incompletes will be given only according to the rules specified in the University of Tennessee Catalog. Please refer to the catalog for additional information.

All written assignments are due at the beginning of the class period on the date specified on the course outline. Assignments received after the deadline will receive a reduced grade.

University policy regarding religious holidays will be observed. As stated in the UT student handbook, any student may request to be excused from class to observe a religious day according to her/his faith.

Students are expected to come to class prepared to discuss the assigned readings.
