Boston: Pearson Education, Inc.

Course Requirements and Grade

Class Sessions

Class session will include lectures and discussion to clarify and supplement assigned readings on course topics and the use of role plays, videotapes, written exercises, and so forth to illustrate and emphasize the application of concepts in practice. Students are expected to attend class and to prepare by doing and thinking about the assigned reading. Please let the instructor know if you will not be in class and take responsibility for obtaining any material that was distributed in your absence.

Except in the case of a medical emergency or personal emergency, a student who wants an extension of time to submit a paper should consult with the instructor in advance. Extension is not automatic, and there may be a grade penalty, depending on the reason an extension is agreed upon.

Assignments and Grade

The course grade will be based on three assignments and class attendance. The three assignments are a readings journal, a paper, and a simulated family therapy session/presentation. Guidelines for the three assignments will be distributed on separate handouts. The written paper is due on NOV. 09, 2006. Students will sign up for their presentation dates during the first two class periods. Absolutely NO late papers accepted. NO exceptions. Part 1 of readings journal due OCT 05,2006. Remainder of readings journal due NOV 16,2006. On NOV 16,2006 you must submit ENTIRE journal back to instructor.

The final grade will be based on these three assignments and class attendance, each accounting for one fourth of the final grade. Attendance is heavily waited in this course because you will be in a simulated family and participate in “in class” exercises. This “simulated” family will be the group that you work with on your final project, and your team members will need your active weekly participation.
